Klein takes new position at The New Yorker

NEW YORK — Joe Klein, the formerly anonymous author of "Primary Colors," will join The New Yorker in December, the magazine announced Thursday.

Klein, 50, will leave his job as political reporter and columnist for Newsweek to write The New Yorker's "Letter from Washington" column, said editor Tina Brown.

He replaces Michael Kelly, who is taking over editorship of The New Republic.

"Joe Klein is a superb reporter and analyst, as he proved at Newsweek, and a real writer, as he proved with 'Primary Colors.' That's a combination you don't often come across," Brown said.

Klein had emphatically denied being "Anonymous," the author of the fictional behind-the-scenes tale of the 1992 presidential primaries that many speculated was written by someone inside the Clinton administration.

He owned up to his work only after The Washington Post identified him through handwriting analysis, and fellow journalists were outraged by his elaborate denials.

Klein took a brief leave from Newsweek and resigned his consultant position with CBS News in July, apologizing for any trouble his lies caused the network.

Klein had received a National Headliner Award in 1994 for his Newsweek column, "Public Lives." From 1987 to 1992, he was a political columnist at New York magazine.

He has written articles and book reviews for The New Republic, The New York Times, The Washington Post, Life and Rolling Stone, and authored two nonfiction books, "Payback: Five Marines After Vietnam" and "Woody Guthrie: A Life."

Company recalls lead-filled buckets

CINCINNATI — A Cincinnati company is recalling nearly 12,000 plastic Halloween candy buckets because the paint used on them has lead in it.

The pails look like jack-o-lanterns, skulls or Frankenstein heads.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission said it found high levels of lead in black, yellow and red paint on the buckets. The paint can cause lead poisoning if eaten by a young child.

The treats pails have been sold in sets of six, with a label that says "Happy Halloween" and includes the name of the company, Direct Source International.

There was no answer at the company's headquarters Thursday night.

Consumers are urged to return the items to stores for refunds.

Debate will address religion

Dawn Keller
The BG News

A Christian philosopher will be at the University next week to discuss the existence of God, if there is one true religion and safe sex.

Michael Horner, who has lectured at 13 American universities, said he wants to discuss the issues with the community.

"I really enjoy coming to campuses and interacting with students," he said.

Horner will debate philosophy professor Loren Lomasky in the Union ballroom Oct. 28 at 7:30 p.m. about the existence of God.

Horner said he will give evidence that it is highly probable that God exists.

"There is no absolute certain proof that he does exist, but there is no way to disprove it either," Horner said. "You can prove with a high degree of probability that God exists."

Horner said he wants people to know they do not have to be anti-intellectual to believe in Christianity.

New BG golf course under development

Jack Buehrer
The BG News

The city of Bowling Green will be the site of a new $13 million golf course and housing community currently being developed by the Toledo-based Cavalear Realty Company.

Cavalear has teamed up with Arthur Hills, one of America's most respected golf course designers -- and fellow Toledoan -- to complete this project.

Ground was broken in August for Stone Ridge Golf Club, which will be located at the intersection of Bowling Green West and Wintercrest Roads. The housing community consists of 282 single-family homes and 92 villa sites, while the golf facility will include a par-72, 18-hole championship course, a driving range and a pro shop with a bar and grill on the first level. Bill Wilczynski, Cavalear sales manager for Stone Ridge, said this project has been in the works for some time.

"The original developers were from Bowling Green, and they came up with the idea for a golf course in the late 1980s," Wilczynski said. "They ran into stone walls in the development and presented [Cavalear] with this in early 1996. We came in with the intentions of building a golf course as well as a housing development."

While Cavalear currently has two other projects in the works, CEO Duane Ankney has high hopes for his newest development.

"We have three major communities under construction at the present time," he said. "Right now, Stone Oak Country Club in Toledo is near completion, and The Quarry in Monclova Township is almost a third of the way done. Even though we've just started with Stone Ridge, the exciting thing is we've sold quite a bit of inventory already. Obviously that pleases us a great deal."

According to Wilczynski and Ankney, over 50 percent of the single-family lots and 75 percent of the villa lots have already been sold. Most of the single-family homesites will overlook fairways, greens and lakes on the golf course, while the villa sites will be located in four separate clusters in the community. The

Artwalk features array of works

Tonya Markul
The BG News

Downtown Bowling Green will be the site for the third annual "Autumn Artwalk" on Oct. 25-27.

According to Jennifer Buskey, director of the downtown business association, there will be an array of art from a grouping of eight galleries located in various historic downtown buildings, all of which are in short walking distances.

"The event brings the community downtown to enjoy a diversity of art and to give them awareness of art they may not normally see," Buskey said. "Some galleries will offer light refreshments and have artists present to talk about their work."

In addition to this free event, there may be an outdoor jazz cafe open, weather permitting. There are also restaurants close to the Artwalk for people to grab a bite to eat.

Buskey said there is going to be a variety of arts that anyone at any age can appreciate.

"For instance, there will be oil paintings, quilts, knitting, jewelry and crafts," she said. "It should be an enjoyable experience for all of the public."

Louis Hubbell-Staeble, partner with Renaissance Art and Frame, said, "The public can get to see fine art -- this event is creating an awareness of art in general."

The Artwalk features works by local and regional artists in mixed mediums, all of which help the community in becoming more artistically aware.

"It will open the community's eyes to the many aspects of art in that it literally surrounds us on all sides," Cassandra Webber, sophomore, graphic design major.

The University Fine Arts Center will also be contributing to this event, "Special Sunday at 2," featuring the Graduate Saxophone Quartet and refreshments provided by Grounds for Thought.

City tables plan, awaits decision on redistricting

Jay Young
The BG News

The Bowling Green City Council has tabled a redistricting proposal as they appeal a decision made last year declaring the current one unconstitutional.

Student Legal Service won a case against the city last fall when a U.S. magistrate judge ordered the city to develop a plan to change the way citizens are represented on City Council.

The city currently uses a four-ward system. The University, which is located in Ward One, is home to 45 percent of Bowling Green's population, according to the 1990 census. Wards two through four contain 22.3, 12.4 and 20.3 percent of the population, respectively.

Student Legal Services argued, and the court agreed, the system is unfair to students.

The city appealed the decision in federal district court, but it was upheld. The city is appealing that decision to the United States 6th District Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. The court of appeals has agreed to take the case and both parties are in the process of filing briefs.

The appeal is based on the city's original argument, according to City Attorney Mike Marsh. In the past, the city has claimed the current system is easy for citizens to understand and allows for better auxiliary services.

Rodney Fleming, SLS managing attorney, said he feels the magistrate's decision will be upheld in this second appeal.

"I'm confident that the decision will be upheld in appeal," Fleming said. "At the same time, they have apparently come up with a plan that they feel is within the constitutional limits."

At the same time, City Council has tabled a proposal that would place 3,910, 4,043, 3,758 and 4,049 registered voters in wards 1-4, respectively.

"We're waiting now for a decision to come back from the court, and that could take years. It is time that it be resolved. It is ridiculous that we have dragged it on this long."

Sarah Ogdahl

Ward One councilwoman

Sarah Ogdahl, Ward One councilwoman, said Census data should be used instead to make sure everyone is represented.

"Personally, I think using registered voter numbers is wrong," Ogdahl said. "I just can't get anyone else on Council to agree that we need to redistrict using Census numbers." Ogdahl called for an executive session after Monday's Council meeting to discuss the current plan. After the session, she said she has no hope a new plan will be put in place without a court order.

"We're waiting now for a decision to come back from the court, and that could take years," Ogdahl said. "It is time that it be resolved. It is ridiculous that we have dragged it on this long."

The next appeal in the case would be to the Supreme Court. Fleming said there is a possibility of the case reaching the high court.

"I think it has a chance. I don't think it has a good chance," Fleming said. "I don't believe that the issues are unique enough that the Supreme Court would want to take it. If the court of appeals were to overrule the other two judges, it would be more likely that the Supreme Court would take it."

This isn't necessarily the news

Normally, I find the nightly news depressing, dull, and a waste of time (particularly when The Simpsons are on). Every so often however, there is a story that uplifts the human spirit, a story that touches the soul, a story so bizarre that it could only be TRUE. I present here three stories of this nature, taking no credit for doing anything but watching TV.

Recently a man from the Cleveland, Ohio area had his truck stolen, taken for a joyride, and crashed into a nearby telephone pole. This is not just another criminal. That's right, the car-thief is a ... STRAY DOG. The Cleveland area man had picked up a stray dog on his way to the store. Since he just had to get a couple of items, the man left his truck running when he went inside. The dog was bored apparently, and started pawing at the gear shift, knocking it into 'drive.' The dog managed to drive the length of five football fields before crashing into a telephone pole.

Luckily for us, reporters at the scene had just invested in the new "Doggy Translator," and were able to ask the dog a few questions before it escaped once again. Even more luckily, I "managed" to get a copy of the transcript to print here.

Q: "Why did you put the truck into drive?"

Tom Mather

A: "If I would've put it in neutral, I wouldn't have gotten on TV, now would I?"

Q: "What do you have to say to the owner of the truck?"

A: "That I'm sorry for damaging his truck and aarf! dog woof woof food (note: some Doggy words do not directly translate).

I have to thank my sister for staying up one night just to hear this story.

Imagine, if you will, that you are a middle-aged woman working in Cleveland. (This was hard for me, and I imagine it will be hard for a lot of you too. I've never worked in Cleveland either.) Imagine that after a hard day of work you come home, pull in the driveway, and discover that you've been robbed. The thieves have taken everything in your garage. You look up and realize that, as a matter of fact, they've taken the whole garage.

This really happened to a Cleveland woman recently. There had not been a tornado, the rest of the house was still intact, but her whole garage and everything inside of it was missing. Just as she was trying to figure the whole thing out, the phone rang. Could it be someone with an explanation, or was it just her friend Nancy from across the street? Before I give you the phone call, I want to remind everyone one more time that this story is absolutely true.

"Hello?"

"Jill? This is Nancy from across the street. You would NOT BELIEVE the day I've had. The kids got up late, so I had to drive them to school. That made me late to work, where I broke a nail, and found out we lost the Chia-Pet account. Then when I got home, I found out the contractors we had hired to tear down our garage hadn't shown up. Jill, I- Jill? Hello? ... Was it something I said?"

This last story did not happen this year, or for that matter, in this country. I fear however, that I may not remember all of the details, since it happened so long ago. I will do my best to tell this story exactly as it happened.

As I remember it, this story took place somewhere in Greece. I do not know the names of those involved, or even any Greek names. To be honest, the only foreign language I know is Spanish, so I will give the people in this story Spanish names. I don't care if you don't like it, you can't stop me. Their names were Eduardo and Lolita. Now for the story.

Eduardo and Lolita were having a bug problem. Their bugs were coming through the sewer system, up the pipes and into the sinks and toilet. Finally one day Lolita had enough. She bought some Navy Seal Raiding Nitroxus Thermo-nuclear Bug Deodorizing Spray. She sprayed it where ever there were pipes. NOTE: This included the toilet.

It was about this time Eduardo came home from work, regretting the burrito he had for lunch. Before Lolita could say otherwise, Eduardo rushed in and used the toilet. The toilet still had the thermo-nuclear bug spray on it! OUCH!!

You may be thinking "That's kind of funny, in a sick sort of way. But it's not that funny." You're right. The funny part happened when the paramedics came to take Eduardo to the hospital. As they were carrying him down the stairs, he asked Eduardo how he hurt himself. When he told them, the medics started laughing so hard they dropped Eduardo down the stairs. Now that's funny. (Unless of course, you are Eduardo.)

Leadership needed in black community

The Million Man March of October, 1995 was the largest public demonstration of African Americans in US history. Despite the controversies surrounding the event, including the exclusion of black women from the mobilization, most black Americans felt an incredible sense of empowerment from the March. Many hoped that this demonstration would mark a renaissance of black male activism and a commitment to black unity.

But even at the March itself, there were signs that these goals would be difficult to achieve. Farrakhan's keynote address at the March was widely recognized, even by many of his supporters, as disappointing at best. More than two hours long, it was rambling and occasionally nearly incoherent. Unlike Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have A Dream" speech at the 1963 March on Washington, which succinctly captured the political mood of the times, Farrakhan's address lacked a political strategy which could bring together the broadest democratic forces within our community. The emphasis on "atonement" and personal responsibility seemed to parallel the conservative, patriarchal rhetoric of the Christian Coalition and the Republicans' Contract With America. This is why Republican vice presidential candidate Jack Kemp, a white conservative, extends praise and support to Farrakhan, a black nationalist: both men essentially agree on self-help and private enterprise.

The principal political instrument which could have expanded the tremendous popular support sparked by the March was the National African American Leadership summit. The Summit had been established by Benjamin Chavis when he was still executive director of the NAACP. In June, 1994, Chavis called together over one hundred prominent African Americans to the NAACP headquarters in Baltimore, to establish a process which would build a national coalition of black organizations.

Two months later, Chavis was fired from his NAACP position under charges of financial and sexual impropriety. He quickly found a defender and patron in Farrakhan. With his support, Chavis was able to maintain the Summit, which evolved into a non-profit coalition of more than two hundred black groups. Many of these organizations reflected the black nationalist orientation of a significant segment of the African-American middle class: black sororities and fraternities, black professional organizations in medicine, social work, law and engineering, and business associations such as the World Africa Chamber of Commerce. Largely missing, however, was representation from black trade unions, progressive groups, black feminists organizations, civil rights formations and black elected officials.

In the national mobilization for the March in 1995, more than 400 local organizing committees were formed. Thousands of black men who had never been actively involved in political organization stepped forward. The historical stage was set for the construction of an authentic black united front, similar perhaps to the Natlinal Negro Congress, founded by A. Philip Randolph in the Great Depression during the 1930s.

But history did not repeat itself. Randolph was a democratic socialist, and the militant leader of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. His vision of politics was based in the activism of the black working class. Even as NAACP leader, Chavis had alienated many prominent black trade unionists by endorsing NAFTA. He displayed little interest in organizational details or management skill. Neither Farrakhan nor Chavis have had much experience in building broad coalitions with groups who hold widely divergent beliefs and philosophies. Moreover, because Chavis apparently believes that his own political destiny is tied to Farrakhan's, he has been unwilling or unable to define a truly independent role for himself. This contributes to the perception, unfairly or not, that Chavis has become merely a mouthpiece for Farrakhan and the Nation of Islam.

In a city like Detroit, for example, there were more than one dozen different local committees which were created by the March. As one local activist explained to me, these new leaders were "ideologically all over the map." Some have long histories of struggle and practical experience as community organizers, while others were inexperienced and virtually unknown. A similar situation existed all over the country. These organizational weaknesses in the structure and administration of the Leadership Summit contributed to a lack of direction and focus, driving away many young African Americans who had been inspired to activism by the Million Man March.

Cuban missile crisis tapes released

Jon Marcus
The Associated Press

BOSTON — At the height of the Cuban missile crisis, one of President John F. Kennedy's top military commanders warned him that failing to invade the island would be like backing down to Hitler's initial demands in Europe.

"This is almost as bad as the appeasement at Munich," Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Curtis LeMay told Kennedy on Oct. 19, 1962, according to newly declassified White House tape recordings released Thursday.

LeMay's comment "was an amazing thing to say to any president, but it was a particularly amazing thing to say to this president," said Sheldon Stern, historian at the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston, where the tape recordings were released. "It's a deep personal insult."

Kennedy's father, Joseph P. Kennedy, served as U.S. ambassador to Britain at the time of the 1938 Munich conference, where the British and French agreed to let Nazi Germany take land from Czechoslovakia in exchange for a short-lived promise of peace. The elder Kennedy's support of appeasement later was strongly criticized and may have cost him any hope of running for national office.

LeMay, like other military leaders, advocated immediate military intervention to destroy the Soviet missiles and unfinished silos that had been detected by aerial reconnaissance in Cuba. He said blockading ships bound for Cuba, as other presidential advisers urged, would lead to war anyway.

President Kennedy, who privately called LeMay "field marshal," did not respond to the remark and the meeting went on to cover other military and diplomatic issues.

The National Archives

released 15 hours of tapes from the Kennedy White House, covering meetings that took place during the decision-making phase of the crisis 34 years ago this week at the climax of the Cold War. Authorities deleted 27 minutes they said covered intelligence sources or methods that still are being used. An additional 211 hours of tapes from the Kennedy White House remain secret.

Much of the material has already been recounted in the writings of participants, and summaries of the meetings were released in 1992.

"What you're getting is the interaction between the principals," said Stephanie Fawcett, the National Archives' senior foreign policy archivist. "You are literally a fly on the wall" in the White House.

Several of Kennedy's advisers, foremost among them Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, urged an attack.

The tapes indicate that President Kennedy initially appeared to agree that he would be forced to resort to military action. But they also show that U.S. intelligence had vastly underestimated what is now known to have been the strength of Soviet forces in Cuba.

The Americans believed there were no more than 1,500 to 3,000 Soviet troops, while documents released after the fall of the Soviet Union showed there actually were 42,000, and they were armed with tactical nuclear weapons.

Kennedy felt painted into a corner by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's offer to remove the Cuban missiles if the United States removed its Jupiter nuclear missiles from Turkey. The president said Khrushchev's offer, which he ultimately accepted, was so reasonable that it would turn world public opinion to the Soviet side.

FBI says militia general admits to bombing plot

David Sharp
The Associated Press

ELKINS, W.Va. — The commanding general of the Mountaineer Militia admitted his role in a plot to blow up the FBI center in Clarksburg, an FBI agent testified Thursday.

Floyd Looker made the statement when he was caught Oct. 11 with cash in his long underwear and briefcase after he allegedly sold copies of blueprints of the center, said Special Agent J.C. Raffety.

"From our standpoint, he admitted everything," Raffety testified.

U.S. Magistrate David Core ordered Looker held without bond.

Looker, 57, of Stonewood, is accused along with six others of plotting to bomb the FBI's Criminal Justice Information Services center. Two other targets have not been identified.

Looker faces one count each of providing materials to be used in an attack and manufacturing and dealing in explosives and two counts of conspiring to bring explosives across state lines.

Raffety testified that Looker planned to keep $10,000 of the $50,000 he was allegedly paid by an undercover FBI agent for photographs of the blueprints.

Looker was concerned that the money might be counterfeit. He insisted that the undercover agent, posing as a broker for a Middle East terrorist group, bring only new $100 bills recently circulated by the government, Raffety said.

Stephen Herndon, Looker's lawyer, suggested the blueprint copies could have been obtained elsewhere and it was not illegal to possess them.

He also suggested there were no imminent plans to attack the targets and that some of the explosives obtained by Looker were nothing more than flash powder in cardboard boxes.

The only way it would be dangerous, he said after the hearing, was "if you swallowed it, or stuck it in your ear."

Herndon said that Looker and the others were, "inefficient, ill-informed, and ill-advised, but not criminals."

Under Herndon's questioning, Raffety said Looker once advised him of a fax in which a prisoner with ties to another militia group threatened President Clinton.

Looker obtained the blueprint copies from Clarksburg fire Lt. James R. Rogers, who took photographs of blueprints on file at the fire department, the government contends.

Two men from Ohio — James M. Johnson, 48, of Maple Heights, and Imam A. Lewis, 26, of Cleveland — sold explosive devices to the militia for about $14,000, authorities said.

Many of the conversations were captured on 200 tapes recorded by O. Marshall Richards, Looker's security chief and second-in-command.

Looker said after his arrest that Richards had acted on his orders, according to Raffety.

After finding out Richards was the informant, Looker called him a pathological liar sent by the FBI to bring down as many people as possible.

Raffety also testified that Richards was compensated more than he had originally testified, about $30,000 in all.

Raffety testified last week that Richards was paid about $20,000. He revised the figure Thursday, testifying the informant was paid $2,000 a month plus expenses and relocation costs.

Looker made no statement in court Thursday.

Richards is under FBI protection.

All seven of the men are being held without bond. Their cases will be presented to a grand jury next month, said U.S. Attorney William Wilmoth.

villas are expected to start under $150,000, and single-family homes will start from $175,000.

The golf course is considered by many to be the centerpiece of the Stone Ridge community. Designer Arthur Hills has also designed other area courses such as Maumee Bay State Park in Oregon, Ohio, Fox Hills in Ann Arbor, Mich. and Detwiler in Toledo.

Steve Forrest, a design associate with Arthur Hills and Associates says they have been designing the course since 1993.

"The original people interested in building a golf course on this land approached us about three or four years ago," he said. "We designed the course in about six months. When the financing fell through in 1994 we put the design on hold, and restarted with Cavaleer in the beginning of 1996."

The course is expected to be hilly and undulating with its design including six lakes totaling 21 acres.

The semi-private course will measure 6,910 yards from the championship tees and 6,300 yards from the member/daily tees, and will weave through and around the housing community. Holes 12 and 13 will be visible from the intersection of Bowling Green Road West and Wintergarden.

Ankney expects the housing community to be completed in five to seven years, and anticipates the first round of golf to be played in the spring of 1998.

Brown said he hopes the events get people talking.

"We want people to think about their spiritual beliefs," he said. "Our hope is to get people thinking."

Horner will also speak in several classrooms during his three-day visit about atheism and the New Testament.

Horner said the New Testament can be trusted as a historical document.

"The New Testament translations are very, very close to the original," he said. "There are not many changes."

He will speak about atheism on

Horner said the response to his events in the past have been positive.

Pettitte outduels Smoltz, backs Braves to the wall

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The New York Yankees might miss this ballpark more than the Atlanta Braves.

Andy Pettitte outpitched John Smoltz in a classic duel, and the Yankees moved within one win of the World Series championship by hanging on for a 1-0 victory over Atlanta in Game 5 Thursday night.

In the last game ever to be played at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, the Yankees finished this postseason 8-0 on the road. They did it by working around a leadoff double in the ninth inning by Chipper Jones. Pettitte got one out and John Wetteland got the last two, the final one a fly ball that gimpy right fielder Paul O'Neill caught on the move with runners at first and third.

Now, they'll return to Yankee Stadium — where they're just 2-4 this October — with a chance to clinch their record 23rd title.

Game 6 will be Saturday night, with Jimmy Key starting for New York against Greg Maddux.

The final game at this park turned out to be anything except the kind of slugfest that earned this place its reputation as The Launching Pad. Instead, the House that Hank Built — Hank Aaron that is — went out with a whimper, with a total of only nine hits and the lone run scoring as a result of an error.

Still, Yankees manager Joe Torre was glad to take it. He hit the first regular-season home run at the stadium in 1966 and was back for his greatest win in the majors.

Pettitte shut out the Braves on four hits through the first eight innings, and also helped himself by throwing to third for a forceout in a key spot in the sixth.

Smoltz fell to 9-2 lifetime in the post-season despite not giving up an earned run. A miscommunication in the outfield caused a two-base error on center fielder Marquis Grissom in the fourth and set up an RBI double by Cecil Fielder. Smoltz struck out 10 in eight innings and permitted four hits.

Jones opened the ninth with a double and moved to third when Fred McGriff grounded out to the right side. Wetteland relieved and Javy Lopez grounded out to draw-in third baseman Charlie Hayes, keeping Jones at third. After pinch-hitter Ryan Klesko was intentionally walked, pinch-hitter Luis Polonia pulled a fly ball that O'Neill caught in the alley.

Marshall to host 1st MAC title game

The Associated Press

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Marshall University will host the first Mid-American Conference football championship next year in its first season in the league, conference officials said Thursday.

"We hope to be part of the championship game," said Marshall President J. Wade Gilley. "We don't know who we'll be playing but we certainly hope to be there."

Beginning with the 1997-98 season, the Mid-American Conference will split into two divisions for six team sports, including football. The football championship game will pit the winner of the East Division against the winner of the West Division for the league title, Conference Commissioner Jerry A. Ippoliti said.

"With a national reputation for hosting these types of events, a first-class facility and the proud people of Huntington, the MAC is excited and fortunate to have this site for this inaugural football championship," Ippoliti said in an announcement on the Marshall campus Thursday.

The game will be played on the first Saturday in December 1997.

The winner of the league title historically plays in a bowl game in Las Vegas, but Gilley said other bowls are making proposals to the league.

"Probably both the runner-up and the champion will play in a bowl," Gilley said.

The 1997-98 season will be Marshall's first in Division I-A play after leaving the I-AA Southern Conference.

Marshall's football stadium, completed in 1991, has been the site for the last four Division I-AA national football championships.

Gilley said Marshall will earn a minimum of $50,000 for playing host to the MAC championship. If the Thundering Herd wins a berth in the game, he said, "We might get a lot more than that."

The city of Huntington benefits a great deal as well, Gilley said. An economic study completed in 1995 indicated a I-AA championship game brings as much as $4 million into the city from fans paying for food, lodging and entertainment.

Something has to give

Rushing game key in BG-Ohio battle

Scott Brown
The BG News

A clash of biblical proportions?

Not really, but something has to give in the rushing game when Bowling Green and Ohio meet Saturday at Peden Stadium in Athens (2 p.m., WBGU-FM).

The Falcons enter the game with the Mid-American Conference's top rushing defense, giving up just 96.9 yards per game. The Bobcats, with their complicated triple-option, have the best rushing offense with 257.9 yards per game.

"They are the best defense we've faced as far as stopping the run," Ohio coach Jim Grobe said of the Falcons. "It's going to be a great challenge to our kids just to move the football a little bit."

Ohio is having its best season in 13 years, having sprinted out to a 4-3 record through seven games. At 3-1 in the MAC, the Bobcats are still a major factor in the MAC title chase.

Bowling Green, with two losses in MAC play, is on the outside looking in when it comes to title chances. But a victory over the Bobcats would do even more to foul the MAC title picture in which five teams are still within striking distance of league-leader Toledo.

BG has dominated the series, going undefeated over the past 14 meetings of the two schools. Ohio last won in 1981, but the Bobcats with Grobe's triple-option attack may be the most-improved team in the nation in 1996.

"Ohio is a much improved football team from a year ago," Gary Blackney said. "Traditionally, though, we've played against the option extremely well, whether it's been Akron or Ohio. We've had a good scheme, and we've executed well.

"And we're going to need it. They are pretty good on defense."

While Bowling Green is first in the conference in rushing defense, Ohio is first in total defense. And that could pose a problem for the fledgling Falcon offense, which stands last in the MAC and 107th of 111 Division I-A teams with only 250.4 yards per game.

Backup quarterback Mark Molk gets the start for Bowling Green in the wake of a season-ending injury to Bob Niemet, and Keylan Cates, fresh off a spirited return to the lineup a week ago, will also see more playing time at tailback.

"We're going to need Keylan and some other people to step up now and carry even more of the burden," Blackney said. "Offensively everybody is going to have to rise up and play better."

The defense will have to rise up and give the Falcons another solid performance, but it will be a different type of performance this time. Assignment football is the key to shutting down an option attack, and discipline on defense and the ability to stay with those assignments will prove to be the difference.

Women get break; men to Eastern

After seven straight weekends of competition, the BGSU cross country teams are about to earn a well-deserved break. The women will be sitting out this weekend, but the men's idea of a break is another five-mile race.

The Falcons will be competing in tonight's Eastern Michigan Cross Country Classic, a unique meet in which there is no team scoring. Women's coach Steve Price is resting his top seven, but men's coach Sid Sink isn't going that far.

Junior Jim Weckesser, gone for a student government conference in Washington, D.C., will be absent, as will sophomore Dan Flaute. But other than that, all the BG men will be on the line when the gun fires.

Sink wants to use this meet as a run-off of sorts to see who will fill the final spots on a team of eight that will compete in next Saturday's Mid-American Conference championships. Other than that, his aim is simply to see continued improvement like he saw at last week's Central Collegiates.

"Each person is going to work on trying to improve the weaknesses in their races," he said.

He likes this meet falling a week before the conference championship (held in Muncie, Ind.) because "you need to take a break mentally. Teamwise, everything is already focused on the MAC meet."

Last year's team parlayed that focus into a MAC championship. While Sink admits that a realistic goal this year is fifth or sixth, he is still looking for a certain kind of repeat. Last year's team had its best meet of the year at the MAC.

"That's what we're planning on doing again this year," he said.

And so are the women. Over the objections of several of his runners, Price is not sending any of the women who helped defeat Michigan and tie for third at last

BG takes on Lake Superior

Crucial early-season series for Falcon icers

Blake Parkins
The BG News

This weekend the Falcon hockey team travels to Sault St. Marie for a two-game series against Lake Superior. The Falcons take a perfect 4-0 mark with them on their first road trip of the year.

Lake Superior enters this week of play with a 1-2-1 overall record after a humiliating 7-4 home loss to Maine last weekend.

The Lakers are in the first year of a new regime headed by coach Scott Borek who took over the reigns after a year as the LSSU associate coach. The club boasts 11 new players as well as 19 returning letterwinners.

Lake Superior did graduate several of their 1996 CCHA championship team however, including three-50 point performers, Brian Felsner, Sean Taliaire and Keith Aldridge.

The Falcons will get few cheap goals against seasoned goalie John Grahame. The junior net-minder ranked among the best goalies in the nation last season with a record of 21-4-2. Grahame recorded a stingy 2.42 goals-against average to go with a .904 save percentage.

This will probably be the first formidable challenge of the season and BG coach Buddy Powers says that there is an increased emphasis on controlling the area around the goal this week.

"Grinding is the focus for this week," said Powers. "We're going to have to grind up there. There won't be a lot of easy goals."

High mark means little

Bowling Green was ranked eighth in the nation in a USA Today college hockey poll. These polls are compiled from sports-writers and coaches that don't actually determine the games. Powers doesn't place much stock in polls noting that they don't influence the play of the team.

Swim teams host Tom Stubbs Relays

Mike Leonard
The BG News

The Bowling Green swim teams will hit the water for the second time this season as the Falcons host the Tom Stubbs Relay meet today at Cooper Pool.

Head coach Randy Julian looks for this meet to be a competitive but relaxed meet for the Falcons.

"The way we're approaching this meet gives us a chance to see some of our competitors we see later in the year. Yet ... we can have some fun," Julian said.

Julian stated that a large part of this year's success will be determined by the amount of energy and emotion put forth by the teams.

"We are not the most talented team the school has ever seen, men or women, but we can be one of the best teams that we've ever produced if we work together. To sustain (the emotion) over the next five months will be the big challenge," Julian said.

The Falcons will face stiff competition on both sides. The men face numerous regional teams including 17-time defending MAC champion Eastern Michigan, Ashland University and backyard rival Toledo. Defending NCAA Division II champion Oakland University will also be included in the men's field.

The women's field will also include Oakland University, who Julian refers to as the favorite to win the NCAA Division II women's title this year.

Julian said this meet will be the first time in the water for many of the teams the Falcons will be facing.

Women's captain Leanne Shelly is looking forward to the meet and the season.

"I think this season looks very promising. We have a very talented freshman class coming in, and the team is really pulling together," Shelly said.

One of the freshman swimmers Shelly referred to is Nancy Simpson. Simpson brought home two victories last week in her first collegiate meet.

Julian stated that Simpson is capable of becoming an excellent swimmer within the program.

"We brought Nancy in expecting great things from Nancy. She has the right mindset to be a great athlete," Julian said.

Julian expressed satisfaction with the fact that last week women's victory was a total team effort.

"We are a much, much deeper team than we were last year," Julian said.

On the men's side, Tom Stoltz and Brandon Farris are expected once again to lead the Falcons in the pool.

"Tom has added so many things besides the swimming to this program. [Tom has] an air and a confidence that fits in with everybody," Julian said.

The meet will begin at 11 a.m. at Cooper Pool with the diving competition. Swimming events will begin at 5 p.m.

"If you don't play assignment football against an option football team ... if you have a lot of guys free-lancing and not taking care of their responsibilities, that's where option teams come up with big plays," Blackney said.

Ohio's rushing attack ranks ninth in the country, and with the option attack attempts just over nine passes a game. That would seemingly play into the heart of BG's defense, but Blackney warns to the contrary.

"The greatest amount of pressure will be on our secondary because teams like Ohio and Air Force and Navy, they Breidenbach, a junior, will be competing for only the second time of the season as she continues to try to come back from injuries.

Of the women who will not compete, Price singled out sophomore Jess LaFene, seniors Suzanne Isco and Laura Hall, and freshman Nikki Monroe for praise.

seniors who have allowed only a 26.5 shots on goal average.

Powers says that he is pleased with the play of the veterans and the guidance they have provided the younger players.

"I think the seniors are all just doing a great job," said Powers. "Not only in point production on the ice, but in helping to mold the team into a unit."

"They've helped the young guys get acclimated and this is a big thing in my mind on how a team should be formed."

make you prepare so hard for the run and get your secondary so involved in run support that they come out with the play-action passes and that's how they hurt you," Blackney said.

Ohio drew a record 21,000 fans to its last home game against Eastern Michigan three weeks ago, and a bigger crowd is expected for this game. It is also Homecoming in Athens.

"I think football has become fun here at Ohio again," Grobe said. "I think people are starting to dream that maybe we can go back and start winning some games and start having fun out here in the fall."

Falcon men's golf hoping for big finish

The men's golf team hopes for a big finish at the Old Dominion University Invitational Oct. 28-29.

The 36-hole tournament is especially important to senior Jason May, who will be graduating in December, will be playing in his last collegiate golf tournament. This fact has not gone unnoticed by May's teammates.

"I'm going to play harder so [May] can have a memorable last tournament," said team captain Jason Carbone, who is also one of May's roommates. "I'm going to try to get that point across to the rest of the team."

May, the lineup for the tournament includes Scott Cashell, Jeff Hunt and Mike Kotsos. Of the five, three played in the last tournament, the Kroger Intercollegiate, according to coach Todd Brunsink.

Twenty-one teams will play in the tournament, Brunsink said, adding that many of the teams will be from the East Coast, including Duke and Furman. Many of the teams in this tournament do not regularly play the University, but Brunsink has high hopes.

"I'd like to clear up the question marks in the minds of the players," Brunsink said. "What you're looking for in the fall is consistency."

Consistency has not been seen this fall. This will be, in actuality, the team's second tournament. The Eastern Kentucky University tournament was cancelled, so prior to this tournament, the team has only played 90 holes of golf this fall.

The purpose of the fall season, according to Brunsink, is like spring training for the baseball team. Brunsink said the players prove they belong on the team, and create a consistent lineup for the spring season.

Carbone has started to feel a consistency.

"I think that we're finally starting to realize what it takes to prepare for these tournaments," he said.

Brunsink hopes the tournament provides a good finish.

"Positive scores and positive results will make for a good winter," Brunsink said.

Fry: OSU "best in the nation"

Greg Smith
The Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa - Against No. 2 Ohio State on Saturday, Iowa coach Hayden Fry is praying for rain.

"It might reduce the margin of victory," Fry says. "Maybe Ohio State won't beat us quite as bad if it's raining cats and dogs."

And maybe Fry, a master at poor-mouthing his team's chances, believes the 20th-ranked Hawkeyes have a chance given that the Buckeyes (6-0 overall) fell behind 14-0 against Purdue last week and hung on to beat Wisconsin 17-14 the week before.

Coach John Cooper's Buckeyes appear nearly invincible, leading or tying in 10 of 12 conference categories, including the best offense and defense.

"I think Ohio State's the best football team in America," Fry said.

He thought that last year at Columbus, when OSU scored touchdowns the first six times it touched the football and raced to a 56-0 lead by halftime. Cooper rested his starters in the second half, allowing Iowa to lose 56-35.

"That's one of those halves you dream about. Everything we tried worked, and they hurt themselves some," Cooper said. "The difference this year is they're a much, much, much more aggressive football team defensively than what they were last year, based on what I've seen."

"I think what happened last year over here is not going to have any effect on what's going to happen over there."

Iowa defensive lineman Jon LaFleur, who is matched against 6-foot-6, 330-pound all-American tackle Orlando Pace, hopes Cooper is right.

"I don't think - I'm not for sure, I can't foresee the future or anything - but hopefully they won't dominate us the way they did last year," he said. "We're going to do our best and see what we can do."

While Ohio State eventually overwhelmed the Bollermakers 42-14 last week and hung on against the Badgers, the Hawkeyes have had gut checks nearly all season.

They've rallied from behind to claim victories in four of their five victories, including last week's 21-20 triumph at Penn State.

Tiger lurking at Tour Championship

Ron Sirak
The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. - Almost everything in Thursday's first round of the Tour Championship unfolded with an awkward sense of anticipation as edgy players and anxious fans glanced over their shoulders and asked: "Where's Tiger?"

Vijay Singh and British Open champion Tom Lehman shared the lead at 4-under-par 66 on a warm, breezy day at Southern Hills Country Club, one stroke ahead of U.S. Open champion Steve Jones and Phil Mickelson, the No. 1 player on the money list, and two better than Brad Faxon and Fred Couples.

But lurking in the lush Oklahoma hills was Woods, four strokes back after shooting an even-par round.

"I shot 70," Woods said after a three-birdie, three-bogey round. "Around here that's pretty good."

Asked the strength of his game on a day in which he missed several short putts and hit a couple of wild shots, Woods said: "I'd have to say it was my mind. I just hung in there. I didn't have my best stuff."

The 70 was the first time in Woods' eight tournaments as a professional that he failed to break par in the first round. But it left him in a good spot. Tournaments aren't won in the first round, but they can be lost then. Woods positioned himself nicely.

"The first round you just don't want to blow yourself out of it," Woods said.

Several of the big names in the field dug holes for themselves in the first round. Greg Norman and PGA champion Mark Brooks shot 73s, Masters champion Nick Faldo shot a 75 and Ernie Els had a 76.

Singh's 66 came on the strength of his putting, an unusual occurrence for the long hitter from Fiji.

"I putted well for a change," Singh said. "I think I had 10 putts the first eight holes."

Singh abandoned his long-shaft putter several weeks ago and went back to a regular-shaft club. "Based on this, I should have done it sooner," he said.

Lehman's 66 could have been better.

"I three-putted twice and missed three putts under 12 feet on the last three holes," Lehman said. "I could have come in four or five shots lower."

Lehman, who has an outside shot to catch Mickelson and Brooks in player of the year voting, said Woods is a motivation to everyone in the elite field.

"I firmly believe that Tiger may be pushing us," Lehman said. "You tend to get blasé about playing golf. But nobody wants to be yesterday's news."

Woods is playing the toughest course and against the most difficult field since turning pro.

'Trainspotting' returns

Aaron Weisbrod
The Back Pages

For those of you who missed it the first time around, the underground smash-hit film "Trainspotting" will be making a special return appearance at the Cla-zel theater in Bowling Green tonight and tomorrow night.

"We've been preparing for this for several weeks," commented WFAL Special Events Coordinator John Riccardi. "It took a lot of time to coordinate and set up the event between WFAL, Finders, the Cla-zel Theatre, and Capitol Records."

Although a lot of hard work and dedication has been necessary to ensure that this weekend's events run smoothly, Riccardi felt very privileged to be able to help bring the film to Bowling Green.

"WFAL leaped at the chance to do this because the film's soundtrack is incredible, and we've been giving it a lot of airplay. We feel the music on the soundtrack is really representative of our format -- it was a bonus to be able to sponsor the film's return to BG," Said Riccardi.

The film, which focuses on the lifestyles of five heroine addicts in Scotland, will be playing at the Cla-zel theater tonight at 10:30 and tomorrow night at Midnight.

Unlike most movies shown at the Cla-zel, however, tickets for "Trainspotting" are free, but only available through two select locations: Finders Records on Main Street and the WFAL radio station (which is located in 120 West Hall).

Tickets will be available at Finders until their supply of tickets runs out, while WFAL will only be distributing tickets from noon to 6:00 PM Friday. After that, all of WFAL's remaining tickets will be taken to Finders.

Furthermore, there were more passes printed than there are seats at the Cla-zel, so it has been recommended that people who plan on seeing the film arrive at the theater early.

"We're expecting a full house for both screenings. In fact, we'll probably have to turn a lot of people away at the door," Riccardi explained.

"Trainspotting" has been making similar return appearances throughout the country, and Riccardi explained that all parties involved are extremely excited about the film's return to Bowling Green.

"Capitol Records approached us about staging this event in Bowling Green. They've done similar free screenings in bigger markets like Ann Arbor and Cleveland, as well as other big cities all over the country, so it's really exciting that they were even interested in doing this in a small mid-western college town like BG."

"We've been preparing for this for several weeks. It took a lot of time to coordinate and set up the event between WFAL, Finders, the Cla-zel Theatre, and Capitol Records."

John Riccardi
WFAL

Raffles for free "Trainspotting" merchandise are going to be held before each showing, and even people who aren't admitted in to the theater to watch the film can enter the raffle.

As an added incentive for the highly devoted "Trainspotting" fans out there, a chance to win extra prizes will be garnished to attendees who bring a copy of each of the five different "Trainspotting" flyers scattered throughout the town and campus to the theater.

Winners will not have to be present at the time of the drawing to receive their prizes.

Finders will also be selling copies of the movie's soundtrack at the theater before and after the show for people who are interested in acquiring it.

Although the show doesn't even officially begin until tonight, Riccardi reported that response to the event has already been overwhelmingly positive.

"We hope to do several more events like this one -- WFAL might be ranked one of the best college radio stations in the country, but we're nothing without our listeners. This is just our way of giving back to the community."

STOMP rocks Toledo using 'trashy' music

Aaron Weisbrod
The Back Pages

When I was but a wee lad I used to get a practically unholy joy out of beating pots and pans together in what could best be described as a preschooler's attempt at music.

As time dragged on, I soon learned that the sounds I made could be broadened and manipulated by incorporating objects such as clothespins, metal and wooden spoons, and other various household objects into the mix. Before I knew it, I began considering myself the most happening 3-year-old in Dunbridge, and seldom a day passed when my mother wouldn't have to strip me of my pot-and-pan rhythm section.

Fast-forward 18 years: Here I am, only a few miles from Dunbridge, slaving away behind a 12-year-old word processor in a desperate attempt to meet my deadline; while a group of very talented dancers, actors and musicians from the UK are recieving international fame for performances similar to the same ones I put on in my kitchen when I was little.

OK, so maybe STOMP's shows are a little more involved and intricate than my youthful solo performances were...

OK, OK ... I admit it. STOMP's performances are a lot more complicated than my youthful solo performances were.

Formed as STOMP in 1991, the traveling entourage of performers creates some of the most phenomenal and amazing music imaginable by using "instruments" that include plastic tubing, boxes of matches and trashcan lids.

In fact, the troupe goes through a list of materials per week that includes 20 brooms, 40 gallons of water, six wooden poles, five Sunday New York Times, 30 pounds of sand, seven mop heads and 10 garbage can lids.

Include some steel sinks with draining boards on shoulder- straps, a couple of steel and plastic oil drums, and eight very enthusiastic performers, and you've got STOMP.

This past weekend STOMP made their second set of appearances at the Stranahan Theater in Toledo within the past year, and yet again they performed to a capacity and enthusiastic crowd.

Performing for an hour and a half straight, the performance started with a lone tank top-clad man sweeping the stage. As he conducted this activity, he suddenly discovered a distinct rhythm in the sound his broom makes as he runs it across the stage floor ... and it's a rhythm he starts to explore.

Ska-rock band The Urge tours as way of life

Aaron Welsbrod
The Back Pages

It's no secret to anyone who likes music that ska is the up-and-coming music jaunra that will probably be the next "big thing."

But as a guitar player in a ska band out of Pittsburgh once told me, "Ska is a very limited style of music ... You've got to combine it with something else."

I highly doubt that The Urge, a ska-influenced septet hailing from St. Louis, has ever met the Pittsburgh-based ska guitarist I spoke with about ska a few months ago, but they undoubtedly subscribe to the same musical philosophy.

Rather than blending ska with just one other style of music, (such as punk/ska sensation Goldfinger, who combines ska with punk), The Urge combines ska, jazz, reggae, pop, funk, rock and dance to create a very well-crafted style of music that has been appealing music-lovers across the country for about the past nine years.

The result of the unique blend of music styles has gained The Urge both a musical style they can (and do) honestly call "all their own," as well as opening slots for bands ranging from The Mighty Mighty Bosstones to Public Enemy to Fishbone to RUN D.M.C.

As anyone who has seen The Urge live can attest to, the band's incredibly upbeat and out of control live shows have helped rocket them to success, but another key factor has been their numerous tours opening for the pop-ska band 311 over the past three years.

"We've had some really big shows across the whole nation with 311. You couldn't ask for anything cooler than that. We were an unsigned band out there touring and to be able to hook-up with something like that is pretty incredible." Commented Steve Ewing, lead-singer and co-founder of The Urge, during a recent interview.

And how exactly did The Urge manage to hook-up with such a large status band?

They simply happened to meet 311 in Mississippi, and then again later in Atlanta. Their blossoming friendship resulted in talks of touring together, and before long the two bands began embarking on nation-wide touring stints.

The Urge

This in turn helped The Urge's record sales even more, and their last self-released disc ("Receiving the Gift of Flavor") sold 20,000 copies ... and that was before the band signed to Sony Records and had the disc re-released with an extra song.

"We talked to a lot of labels ... but [Sony Records] was pretty much the one that had it going on. Everyone there was cool, everyone was progressive, and they got what we were doing and where we were coming from." Explained Ewing when asked why they finally chose to sign with the Sony/Epic label.

Although "Receiving the Gift of Flavor" is The Urge's first major-label release, the band has actually been releasing albums since 1989, and has four albums under their collective belts to date.

"I'd like to make a compilation or something like that in the future ..." Ewing confirmed when on the topic of the band's past releases, which are currently discontinued.

The band also acknowledges that heavy, seemingly non-stop touring has also helped them reach the mainstream success they are finally starting to experience (their video for the song "Brainless" has just started to receive play-time on MTV's 120 Minutes as well as "The Box").

The Urge currently has plans to tour constantly until Christmas, at which time they'll be taking a short break to catch-up on some rest and relaxation.

Although some bands don't like to go on long and involved tours to strange and far away lands, Ewing practically thrives on it. "I love it." Ewing exclaimed when asked about his feelings on relentless touring. "I was just home for two days, and that was cool. It was just enough time to say 'Hi' to my mom and friends and to take care of some business and then get back on the road again. If I'm home too long I start to lose my mind ... I start to get antsy and go crazy."

Not forgetting his own band's humble beginnings, Ewing was also willing to offer some words of advice to other "underground" bands out there.

"Keep doing it. Don't give up, just keep playing. It took us nine years to get a record deal, and getting a record deal isn't always the biggest thing in the world anyway."

STOMP

Within a few minutes a second performer joins the first performer on stage sweeping. He too discovers that a certain groove can be found in his sweepings. Soon a third sweeper finds his way on to the stage, followed by a fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth. Within moments the whole squad of stage sweepers are busting out their own little beats, and before the crowd knew it they were all tapping their collective feet to the catchy (and now combined) rhythm.

The second piece consisted of a matchstick-maraca (macarana, not macarena) showdown, and this little ditty quickly blended into an interactive clap and stomp (stomp, not STOMP) interactive that came to include all eight of the STOMPsters clapping, stomping and dancing across sand.

Other pieces of interest included mops, dust pans, sticks, wooden poles, saws, Zippo-style lighters, wooden crates and, of course, garbage cans.

Ahhh yes ... the garbage cans. The final performance STOMP put on before their encore was an incredible collaboration I've become accustomed to affectionately calling "Ode to the Trash-can."

This final blow-out performance involved all eight performers on stage "playing" various trashcans, trashcan lids, plastic and steel oil drums and various other trashcan-related objects in a musical performance that has to be experienced to be believed.

STOMP has won awards all across the globe too numerous to list (believe me, I tried it) and has most recently recorded music for the "Tank Girl" movie soundtrack.

Do yourself a big ol' favor and check STOMP out the next chance you get. It's money well spent, as well as an experience you'll never forget.
